Hello Creator

This project is a speculative concept of how food could be impacted by technology, and how this untraditional communication between humans and food would change our relationships with one another.

The problem I was trying to solve was how I could create an unique communication experience and impact how we view food. I achieved this by researching various philosophies of food handling and ethics of environment. I wrote a poem, programmed an LCD Arduino screen, documented, and crafted a zine in response to this research.

The exploration of technology, food, design, and poetry. A new way to consider consumption.

Have you come to complete your ritual?

Hello Creator   Hunter Hedgepath

Goodbye
Creator

****

****